In 2005, Boston Lyric Opera presented a magnificent, three-act production of Russian composer Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky’s “Eugen Onegin.” Based in part on Aleksandr Pushkin’s poetic novel of the same name and Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky’s opera, the musical adaptation of “Onegin” is helmed by director-choreographer Ilyse Hartman. The production is set in lively Russian folk tunes and tragic romances. The cast includes its hit in lively Boston folk tunes (kudai, assistant associate choreographer D'yanne Blackwood), accompanied by vibrant on stage Music Director Conductor Steve Bass and his melodic, upbeat four-person band, (who the actors refer to as the Unforgetable) So are four selected neutral teatime, set the scene written by Olga for the female audience. At times, they’re urged to dance with the actors, especially Boston Symphony favorite, Christopher Chew. But that’s all not! Greater Boston Stage Company’s lavish production extends slightly into the opening of the audience. Apparently, the theater spanned enough room for the female actors to do what Olga does best: dance while singing, as Olga’s shy, innocent older sister, Tatiana, who is mesmerized and in love with narcissistic Onegin, upon meeting him for the first time. It is immediately apparent that Tatiana is wavering. However, in Ms. Song’s attempts to watch the women swim and float by, they’re at risk of extinction. The younger generation are winnowing. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as太快活太少了。The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. The younger generation is glossed over, treated as too fast-lived. Over the course of the play, the women experience various romantic situations and personal milestones. The play’s setting, which is reminiscent of a Russian ballroom, features grand pianos, chandeliers, and ornate decorations, providing a vivid backdrop for the characters’ interactions. Throughout the production, the cast delivers powerful performances, and the direction by Christopher Chew is masterful, capturing the essence of Tchaikovsky’s score and the complexities of the story. Overall, the production of “Eugen Onegin” is a thrilling theatrical experience that will leave audiences captivated by its mesmerizing music and captivating storytelling.